

THE NEED FOR DIVERSE STORIES

Most of the well-known for us books are written by white, privileged people and show only one perspective of the story. By reading only those books since we were kids, we can subconsciously absorb sets of beliefs that the author has chosen for us.

Reading diverse stories can help us see things from the other point of view, learn and understand other cultures better.

Hear us out!

There are many diverse, underrated authors that have written very good books.

There are some recommendations:

- ,,Children of Blood and Bone" by Tomi Adeyemi
- ,,A Lucky Man" by Jamel Brinkley
- ,,Pachinko" by Min jin Lee